Beerhere: One of a few local craft breweries on the island, with a wide-ranging portfolio of beers and all with hand drawn labels, for an extra unique touch. Beerhere shares their brewery with Penyllan, an Australian-inspired single-barrel brew.

LOCAL PRODUCTS

Bornholm is well-regarded for its pottery, with local expertise in the craft developing in the 19th Century. The local geology – rich in granite, clay, and kaolin – contributes to the high quality of the ceramics.

The island also has a longstanding connection with clocks, known as Bornholmerure (Bornholm Clocks). In 1744, a Dutch ship carrying English grandfather clocks ran aground and local craftsmen were tasked with repairing the clocks. This led to the development of clockmaking in the area, and the establishment of a watchmaker’s guild, Rønne Uhrmagerinteressentskab. From 1750 to 1900 almost 240 watchmakers worked here. Today the Bornholm Museum displays the world’s largest collection of such clocks.

INTERESTING FACT

Rønne was badly destroyed at the end of World War II and desperately needed to be rebuilt. Sweden donated 175 red timber houses to Denmark for the rebuilding effort. The houses are still standing today.
